Beas Season According to Zones.

Trouble over the fishing season in New York State, one line of which is indicated in the letter of Mr. Loope of Millerton about the proposed change in the date of the opening of the beas season, could

It seems to me the commission makes a mistake by trying to maintain deer

The open seasons ought to be regulated by the spawning habits of fish and not by the desire of any section or of any man for an early opening. Years ago, after studying the matter with the late Dr. Bean, I suggested that the State be divided into zones according to the temperature of the waters. The open season for each zone should be fixed by the State, and the breaking because they do not meet with the ordinary man's idea of common sense and fairness, and if observed they interfere, as shown above, with the destruction of the enemies of other game which the State wishes to protect.

Very truly yours,
L. LOOPER

Millerton, N. Y., March 13,

When they are through spawning much sooner than they are in the cold mountain lakes, which need a much later season for the protection of the fish.

It would not be difficult for the Conservation Commission to learn accurately through their army of game protectors how the temperature of the waters of within which the spawning season would be governed by the spawning habits of the fish.

No attempt to establish a general law for all waters ever can be called scientific, nor would such a law, although much easier to make, tend toward the protection of any species.

It is to be hoped that the League study

Ten pickeral may be caught through the ice, but the limit of perch that may be taken is not mentioned in the bill now before the New Jersey Legislature. Now, "South Orange," your fellow Jerseyman is always ready to learn, may perch be caught through the ice, same as pickeral, or does nature differ in this respect?

The Conservation Commission a year ago began a scientific study of the waters of one of the inland counties, and it is hoped that the experts will continue this study by taking up the colder waters of this mountain section. There, never will

Says County Deer Season Best.

Sportsmen in our section of the State oppose the proposed killing of deer with certain exceptions. We believe deer should not be shot every fifth year or any year. Experience has shown that the best deer season is the one that is held every year. In his article regarding the respective game qualities of brook trout and bass, printed in THE SUNDAY SUN of March 11, he makes so bold as to state that the bass is a better scrapper than our beauty of the rifle. This is not so bad, and is probably an opinion shared by a great host of anglers all over the country. But that of deer outside of territory suitable for their propagation are my own, and I do not know that many of the sportsmen hereabouts would agree with me, though I know some do.

I think in counties like Dutchess or any parts of the State where the most of the land is agricultural deer should not be killed.

Y^e gods! How can any clear thinking angler believe that?

I think the order of gameness, as put down by Mr. Rhoads, was as follows: Black bass, rainbow, brown and brook trout. He then goes on to explain as to the ways and means of arriving at this conclusion, to wit: The number of times a game is permitted upon generally, nothing is granted to the rights of all citizens of the State to build them till they are extinct in these localities.

Does do considerable damage in this section of the State and their being here is of absolutely no benefit, as we have no reason to think they are probably as plentiful as they ever could be around here.

Mr. Rhead then proceeds to recall diverse experiences in his wide and varied career in which a bass trapped eleven times a rainbow seven times, &c. My hat is off to Mr. Rhead as the world's champion lightning calculator. Any mortal man who can count the number of leaves made

This is not a suitable habitation for them. They must too often get within gun range of the back door of some one who does not too highly regard the law which requires him to submit to the damage without any return in meat. There is not enough wild land for them.

Their being new leads to other complications which result to the disadvantage of either game. The law against dogs running deer while not to any great extent observed does to some extent keep hunters from hunting foxes and jack rabbits in places where deer are likely to be found, because the hounds immediately find a deer.

are not kept down, in spite of the fact that our county pays a bounty on them. Foxes haven't been so plentiful in many years around here as they are this winter. Rabbits destroy many fruit trees every year and foxes kill untold numbers of game birds and cottontails and snowshoe rabbits. I have seen many places where
